EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

THE Democrats of Ohio have nominated Tom Ewing for Governor.

THE extra session of Congress has proved a neck-breaker to Democracy.

THE Greenback party of Ohio have put up a gubernatorial lamb to be slaughtered.

THE riot investigation has ended, and Wolfe, of Union, didn't succeed in expelling one man.

HON. STANLEY MATTHEWS would like to see President Hayes renominated for the Presidency.

THE Pennsylvania Legislature adjourned last Friday, which will save the State considerable expense and tom-foolery.

BARON ROTHCHILDS, head of the great banking firm of Rothchilds & Co., is dead. He was a grandson of the founder of the firm.

JEFF DAVIS has refused to make a lecturing tour through the North. If the old arch-traitor should come among us the Democratic party would be utterly ruined.

THE junior editor of the Democrat, Mr. Foster, denies that he is an aspirant for the office of Commissioners' Clerk. Tired of holding public offices, eh? Ought to have a medal.

MURAT HALSTEAD, editor of the Cincinnati Commercial, is mentioned as a candidate for Secretary of War. Being an Ohio man, we suppose this would be in accordance with the Ohio "idee."

GEN. GARFIELD says that the Republicans of Ohio will win a rousing victory this fall. The nominations are generally acceptable, and will be supported by the whole party. As goes Ohio in 1879, so goes the Union in 1880.

THERE is not much danger about Secretary McCrary's confirmation as United States Judge for the eighth Iowa District. Almost all of the Democrats will probably vote for it, thus defeating the plans and prejudices of the political buzzards who are endeavoring to secure his non-confirmation.

THE Watchman says the Democrats in Congress have President Hayes in a tight corner, but admits that it does not like the plan agreed upon in the caucus, "because it seems to indicate a weakening of the Democratic nerve." If this is the case, it looks as though the President had the rebels in a tight corner.

MT. ETNA is again in a state of eruption, and thirty new craters have opened within a few days. Owing to the increase of the wealth and productiveness of the surrounding country, the present eruption, it is supposed, will be more destructive than that of 1852, when streams of lava penetrated the woody regions and buried the villages.

TRUE as Gospel: The Press says the Democrats started out with the intention of making Mr. Hayes' presidential chair as uncomfortable as possible. They have succeeded in making him respected and admired by the best classes of all parties, and in bringing to his side the members of his own party who once opposed him.

SOME of the nabobs of Detroit wanted to tender General Sherman the hospitalities of the city, but the General declined. The News says the hospitalities of the city constitute a "device, invented without the authority of law, to enable a few small officeholders to thrust themselves into good company in the name of the people and at the people's expense."

A Word of Advice.

The most potent element of success in the management of a political party lies in its ability to place before the people candidates selected from among the very best men at command. The late Ohio nominations show conclusively that a terrific battle is to be fought, and we believe that good nominations have been made. General Foster, undoubtedly, has several advantages over his competitor, General Ewing, for the reason that he has always been a firm and persistent advocate of honest money. On the other hand, we find that the latter has no record of stability on the financial question, but that he has rather dallied to the desires of the inflationist or communistic doctrine.

It is absolutely necessary that we go into the next campaign with a standard bearer against whom there is not the breath of suspicion, and who will be abundantly able to poll his full party vote. There is not a shadow of doubt as to Pennsylvania's manner of voting in 1880, but a rousing victory this fall would be a first-class starter for the "year of battles."

It is the duty of the members of the different conventions to sift the wheat from the chaff, and from the many to select only those who will be acceptable to the majority and certain of giving satisfaction after election. If delegates are chosen with the proper care, they can have no difficulty in making their selection, and the absolute necessity of adopting every precaution to insure a judicious choice was never more imperative than it will be when our State and municipal tickets are to be framed. With available nominees we will have everything in our favor, and an overwhelming majority for each candidate will be certain. The great Republican party stands just where it did before the war—on the side of the Constitution and the Union, and for the first time since the rebellion was crushed will those of our patriotic voters who have believed that harmony would be promoted and business made to prosper by catering to the demands of the Southern people, unanimously aid in repudiating the acts of the rebel Democracy. Let us, then, in preparing for the coming battle, see to it that the example of Ohio referred to is not forgotten.

ALEXANDER MCGREGOR, an officer of the Confederate army, writes to the Cincinnati Commercial that neither Negroes nor white Republicans can secure the shadow of justice in Mississippi, and that he was driven from the State by a series of persecutions under a law of 1878, forbiding any white man to purchase cotton or farm produce from a Negro. This law, he avers, compelled the Negroes to emigrate to live.

THE New York police are bound to keep up their reputation. This notorious body of officials gave a parade last week, Thursday, during which one of them distinguished himself by getting drunk and clubbing an inoffensive citizen. The average New York policeman is very ambitious—for notoriety—and he is going to have it, even if he has to crack some fellow's cranium for the fun of the thing.

THE Dubuque Telegraph, a Democratic paper, admits that thousands of honest, earnest Democrats are leaving the party, and charges that the Democratic members of Congress have broken faith with the people who elected them. The result could not be otherwise. The party is dyed in treason, and should suffer.

THE trial of Edward Parr, for the brutal murder of his daughter, in May last, has ended, and the verdict of the jury is murder in the first degree, which means that this bloodthirsty villian will hang. This is a righteous verdict, as everybody who is acquainted with the facts in the case will agree.

How They Captured Washington.

Eighteen years ago on the 23d of April last, the Richmond Examiner published the extract below on taking the National Capitol. By the way, the Examiner ought to write a book on what it knows about capturing Washington in 1861. After reading the article and comparing it to utterances delivered in these days by some of the Southern men and newspapers, one cannot but be struck with a singular similarity of sentiment. Having failed to capture the city in 1861 by force of arms, the same men, aided by the same hordé that assisted them then, have been trying for the last eighteen years to capture it by ballots.

Through the reckless folly of men who are supposed to love liberty and union, they have well nigh accomplished their purposes, leaving only the Executive branch of the Government. It is well for the country that so much of a free and united government yet remains. The avowed purposes of these secessionists, expressed by actions that speak louder than words, have brought the loyal people of the country to their feet, as the late elections plainly showed. In 1880, we predict that there will be such a rallying around the stars and stripes as has not occurred since the war. Some of the New England and Western States have already spoken, and Ohio is only waiting for October next when the same voice will be heard sweeping South from the lakes. Here is the extract:

The capture of Washinton city is perfectly within the power of Virginia and Maryland, if Virginia will only make the effort by her constituted authorities; nor is there a single moment to lose. The entire population pant for the onset; there never was half the unanimity among the people before, nor a tithe of the zeal, upon any subject, that is now manifested to take Washington, and drive from it every Black Republican who is a dweller therein.

From the mountain tops and valleys to the shores of the sea, there is one wild shout of fierce resolve to capture Washington city at all and every human hazard. The filthy cage of unclean birds must and will assuredly be purified by fire. The people are determined upon it, and are clamorous for a leader to conduct them to the onslaught. That leader will assuredly arise, aye, and that right speedily.

It is not to be endured that this flight of abolition harpies shall come down from the black North for their roosts in the heart of the South, to defile and brutalize the land. They come as our enemies, they act as our most deadly foes, they promise us fire and bloodshed, and this is the only promise they have ever redeemed. The fanatical yell for the immediate subjugation of the whole South is going up hourly from the united voices of all the north; and for the purpose of making their work sure they have determined to hold Washington city as the point from whence to carry on their brutal warfare.

Our people can take it—they will take it—and Scott, the arch-traitor, and Lincoln, the beast, combined cannot prevent it. The just indignation of an outraged and deeply injured people will teach the Illinois ape to repeat his race and retrace his journey across the borders of the free negro States still more rapidly than he came; and Scott, the traitor, will be given an opportunity at the same time to try the difference between "Scott's tactics" and the Shanghai drill of quick movements.

Great cleansing and purification are needed and will be given to that festering sink of iniquity, that wallow of Lincoln and Scott—the desecrated city of Washington; and many indeed will be the carcases of dogs and caitiffs that will blacken the air upon the gallows before the great work is accomplished. So let it be.

THE German Government has decided to address other European Governments on the subject of the improper, and in some cases inhuman manner in which the war in South America is carried on by belligerent States, and to suggest joint interference.

THURMAN has been as cross as a bear with a sore head since the Ohio convention nominated Ewing for Governor.

The Grand Army.

Last week's Watchman devoted nearly a column to what alleges to be a denouncement of the Grand Army of the Republic, an organization composed exclusively of soldiers of the late war. The Watchman tells about as many lies in its article on this subject as can be conveniently crowded into the same amount of space. It resurrects the old, old story that the society is political in nature, and is kept up with the idea of advancing the cause of Republicanism.

When one considers the antipathy that the editor of the Watchman cherishes towards anything of a meritorious nature relating to the late war, it will not be difficult to explain why he does not entertain kindly motives to the Grand Army of the Republic. We say that when one calls to mind the treasonable part Mr. Meek bore in the war, and that comrades of these very men came to Bellefonte, arrested and put him in a "bull pen" at Harrisburg, it isn't much wonder that he does not like them.

The charge that the Grand Army is a political organization is a base lie. The recently-organized post of this place is anxious that every Democratic soldier in the community should become a member, so that it may demonstrate satisfactorily to them that such is not the case. We are pleased to know that Democratic soldiers are joining, and it is only necessary for them to speak. Major Foster, of the Democrat, speaks favorably of the society, and we judge he understands his business better than does Mr. Meek, who would not, on account of his past record, even be allowed to poke his head inside the ante room.

WASHINGTON.

Special Correspondent.

JUNE 5, 1879.

In carrying out their new programme the Democrats of Congress cannot be accused of wasting time. The new bills are ready for presentation.

The army bill seeks to put an unconstitutional restriction upon the President as Commander-in-chief of the army, as it directs that no money be paid for the services, transportation or subsistence of U. S. troops employed at the polls. It is safe to say that that bill will be vetoed.

The Legislative, Executive and Judicial bill simply extends the appropriation bill of 1878. That bill did not appropriate money for judicial expenses, but such, including that for deputy marshals and supervisors of elections were provided for in another bill. Such of the judicial expenses as do not cover those officials will, this time, also, be covered by a separate measure. The deputy marshals will not be provided for.

The course of the President as to the two bills last mentioned is very doubtful. There is no doubt, however, that every Republican Congressman will do all that he can to see that all the necessary officials of the Government are paid for their services, and especially those whose duty it is to see that fair and free elections are held throughout the country.

There was a slight increase in the public debt last month. The following interesting information is given by the Secretary: Since March 1, 1877, there have been redeemed of 5 and 6 per cent. bonds $846,022,600, with an annual interest of $48,813,057, and issued in their stead the same amount of 4½ and 4 per cent. bonds (all but 135,000,000 being in 5 per cent. bonds) with an annual interest charge of $34,515,880, making a saving hereafter in the interest charge on account of refunding operations since March 1, 1877, of $14,297,177, annually.

The Democratic convention in Ohio seems to have pretty effectually spoiled any passing hope that party may have had of carrying the State. Generals Ewing and Rice are personally very popular here, but their friends don't express a hope of their election.

There is much newspaper comment on the fact that there were no funeral services at the burial of Hon. E. C. Ingersoll in this city on Monday. Except a few remarks by Col. Robt. G. Ingersoll, nothing was said. This, it is proper to say, was as requested by Mr. Ingersoll.

The Warner Coinage bill remains in the Senate Finance Committee, and the chairman, says it probably will not be reported this session. It cannot be passed, even if reported by the Committee. There is almost a certainty that no important financial measures can be passed at present.

PHIL.

A Hopeful View.

The Pittsburgh Commercial-Gazette correspondent has been interviewing General Foster, the Republican nominee for Governor of Ohio, and this is what he says:

Meeting Charlie Foster in the Neil House, we took occasion to ask him what he thought of the action of the Democratic convention.

"It suits us to a dot. Our opponents certainly made a great blunder, but, of course, we will not complain."

"Do you think Ewing will carry the full vote of the party?"

"Well, I scarcely know, but it looks to me as though he would be a bitter pill for the old hard money Democrats to swallow."

"What is to be the character of the campaign?"

"Red hot and aggressive. We will take right hold of the National issues and compel the Democrats to meet us."

"How soon will the war begin?"

"It has begun already. The field operations, that is the speaking, will begin sometime in August. The fire will be kept up all along the line until election day."

"Upon the whole, you regard the situation as promising?"

"It is promising; was never more so; but we do not propose to relax our efforts the least because victory is within our grasp. We want to bury this Confederate business so deep that it will never spring up."

With this, Charlie, as he is called by everybody, turned to receive the congratulations of a crowd of politicians, who had come up to head quarters for a supply of inspiration.

THE opinion among prominent Republicans about the nomination of Mr. Ewing by the Democrats for Governor of Ohio is that it is a weak one. He will have to make his fight without the help of the clique of politicians who have managed the State campaigns of late, and who would be glad to see him defeated. He will have the hostility of Governor Bishop's religious friends of the church, who will be justly offended at the cruel slaughter of their representative man. The hard-money Democrats will vote against him. The Cincinnati people, who nominated and elected Bishop before, say he is defeated because he is no longer rich and cannot be bled by the politicians. Ewing has a good deal of personal popularity, but not much faculty for managing a campaign. After making extraordinary efforts in his district last fall he ran 1,200 or 1,400 votes behind Governor Bishop's vote the year before. For these reasons his easy defeat is predicted.

EDWARD PARR, who was sentenced to death on Monday, for killing his daughter, attempted to commit suicide by taking a dose of strychnine. He fell to the floor as he was leaving the dock. Latest advices say that he is still living, but his recovery is doubtful.

MAYOR COOPER, of New York, was fined last week for using too much water. For once in Gotham the officeholder was made suffer the penalties of the law.

A CENTRE COUNTY MAN KILLED.

Jacob F. Garber Killed by the Kansas Cyclone.

Postmaster Johnston, of this place, received the following letters on last Friday, and handed them to us for publication, as per request. From them we glean the sad intelligence that a citizen of our county, Jacob Garber by name, was killed by the terrible cyclone which devastated a part of Kansas last week, a full account of which appeared in the REPUBLICAN. We do not know Mr. Garber, but trust that the information contained in these letters will reach his family.

THE LETTERS.

DELPHOS, KAN., May 31, 1879.

MR. EDITOR:—For the information of Mrs. Jacob Garber, his children, relatives or friends, if any, I send you the following for publication, with a request that all papers in Centre county copy the same. On Friday, May 30, at 4 P. M., a rain and hail storm visited this place immediately after a cyclone had passed over the country near here, carrying death, desolation and general ruin in its path. A great many houses were blown to atoms and all their contents blown away. A number of persons were killed and many wounded, among whom was a stranger who was traveling in company with another man, both of whom stopped during the storm at a farm house two miles from this place. The house was blown away, and all the occupants killed or wounded. The corpse of the stranger was brought into town, and upon examination of the papers, etc., found upon his body, his name was ascertained to be Jacob F. Garber. His partner was injured somewhat, and tells us also that the name of the deceased was Garber, was fifty-seven years old, was raised in Lancaster county, and has a family in Centre county. Said that Mr. Garber had recently taken a claim in Wallace county, Kan., and intended to return home soon.

Mr. Garber's body was buried in this place to-day in decent order. All papers, clothing, etc., found on the body are in my care, and will be held subject to orders. His large valise was blown away. Any information desired by his friends will be cheerfully given. Address

GEORGE W. STRICKLER,
Delphos, Ottawa Co., Kansas.

SECOND LETTER.

The second letter differs from the first somewhat in name, but this probably occurred because the writer lives ten miles from where the accident occurred, while Mr. Strickler was at hand when his body was brought into town.

MINNEAPOLIS, KAN., June 2, 1879.

POSTMASTER, Bellefonte, Pa.:—One Jacob Garber—Garble—or Grable—we think the first—was caught and killed by a cyclone in this county, ten miles from this place, on Friday, May 30. His skull was crushed and a leg broken in two places, besides being otherwise injured. He was a Dunkard by religion, and is said to have a family grown to maturity. He was in the county west of here locating land, and was on foot, accompanied by a companion from Beloit, Mitchell Co. They were traveling to this place when the cyclone met them. Several parties were killed and many wounded. The family with whom they found shelter, consisting of ten or twelve persons, fared badly. All were wounded, two were killed, and one or two have since died. Mr. Garber was said to have been from your county. If not from your place, perhaps you can ascertain and forward this to his friends. He was decently buried at Delphos, this conunty.

W. D. THOMPSON.

A Family Feud.

OTTAWA, ILL., June 9.—A bloody double tragedy, the result of long standing feuds between the White and Conners families, of this city and vicinity, took place on Saturday. Lawrence White was shot dead by a revolver in the hands of D. T. Conners, and Conners was immediately thereafter killed by a bullet from some unknown hand. Revolvers were freely drawn among the other parties of the quarrel, but no deaths resulted. The cause of the quarrel is not known, and the coroner's jury will investigate.

Poetry.

TRY IT AGAIN.

Come hear what the bird on the hickory sings,
Whose nest was blown off a fortnight ago;
In a new one as soft she is folding her wings,
And a new one sits perched on the branches below.

Come hear what she sings to the heart of the poor,
Whose temples have fallen in wind and rain;
Come hear how she sings a new song that is sure,
To the glorious carol of Try It Again.

What has been badly done cannot perish too soon,
What has been rightly done cannot perish at all,
One work towers at eve, and one totters at noon,
And we know not their worth till they triumph or fall.

I know it is hard to be toiling so long,
I know it is painful to struggle in vain,
To be broken by sorrow and baffled by wrong,
But the duty of life is to Try It Again!

Not a hand on earth but has labor and task,
Not a heart on earth but has duty to do,
Success let us merit whatever we ask,
And fear not but God will be tender and true.

And still, when we falter and fall in the race,
Or the wreck of our hope scatters over the plain,
Remember to look with a pitying face
On the work of thy brother, and Try It Again.

TWO PICTURES.

An old farmhouse with meadows wide,
And sweet with clover on each side;
The bright-eyed boy who looks from out
The door with woodbine wreathed about;
And wishes his one thought all day:
"Oh! if I could but fly away
From this dull spot the world to see,
How happy, happy, happy,
How happy I would be!"

Amid the city's constant din
A man who round the world had been,
Is thinking, all day long:
"Oh! if I could but trace once more
The field path to the farmhouse door;
The old green meadows could I see,
How happy, happy, happy,
How happy I would be!"

Our Story Teller.

Won Again.

CHAPTER I.

A very cosy sitting-room it was that Frank Merwin entered as he returned from a long and wearisome day in the law office. A soft glow was diffused from a fire of sea coal in the grate; the cat lay dozing on the rug, and the fitful gleam of the firelight flashed on a book-case well filled with elegantly bound volumes, on a blooming camelia partially veiled by the heavy lace window curtins, on choice pictures suspended from the walls, on handsome stuffed, easy chairs, and every now and then disclosed, resting in shadow, a child's shoe, that lay in one corner on the Brussels carpets. Near the grate was drawn up the lounge, with Frank's dressing gown thrown over it, and his embroidered slippers just peeping from beneath.

"This looks like comfort," said Frank, as he put on the gown, thrust his feet into the slippers, and threw himself on the lounge in a restful attitude. "I wonder where Mary is?"

At this moment Mrs. Merwin entered, with the lamp in her hand, and found Frank enjoying the quiet firelight.

"Why, Frank," she exclaimed, "when did you come in? I didn't hear you;" and placing the lamp on the table she sat down beside him.

"Only a moment ago," he said, "but it's so pleasant to get home and rest. Is dinner ready? I'm very hungry."

Just then the twinkling bell announced dinner, and they were presently seated at the table. Minnie, the little two-years-old was already in her high-chair, and no sooner did her mother appear than she began, "Tato, tato, bread, milk, butter."

A shade passed over Frank's face, but he said nothing as he helped Mrs. Merwin, and Mollie and Henry and Willie to the roast before him. For a minute or two at a time Minnie was still, but as soon as her eye rested on any dish she had not seen before, she began, "cake, cake, raisins, sugar," and nothing else could be heard. Mrs. Merwin, intent on stopping her clamor, gave no attention to any one else at the table. Frank drew a long breath, and said, in an undertone, as if to himself:

"I do wish she could eat before we do, and be asleep when I come home."

In response to this, Mrs. Merwin said in a petting tone, to Minnie, "Ittle darling doesn't want to eat all alone, and go to bed 'fore papa comes, does she?"

The other children were all over four years old, and had been trained in table manners by their father so well that their presence was no annoyance; but this little Minnie he couldn't manage, and cunning and pretty though she was, she was a real torment to her father when he came home worn and tired with the business of the day.

At last the dinner was over, and the baby put to bed, to Frank's great relief. "Now I can talk with Mary," said he to himself, "and forgot the fatigues and cares of the day;" and he went to his overcoat and drew from his pocket the last new magazine to show her when she came.

Entering with work-basket in her hand, Mrs. Merwin began, "such a time, Frank, as I've had to-day; I wouldn't tell you before, you looked so tired; but Bridget went off this morning to see a sick cousin, and didn't get back until dinner was ready, so that I had everything to do and Minnie to take care of beside. She has got a double tooth coming, and is awful cross. Right in the midst of my work Mrs. Kingfisher called, and I had to leave everything and dress to see her, and she staid so long that my kitchen fire got low, and I thought I never should get dinner in time; then Henry came home from school with the earache, and I thought I never should get him quiet, but I did at last. Oh, dear, such a day as I've had."

"I've brought home the new magazine, Mary," was Frank's only response to this long catalogue of ills; but his mind ran back over the toils the day had brought to him; heavy business anxieties, annoyances that pierce to the quick; disappointments that involved more than he cared to compute; and he looked on his pleasant surroundings with wistful air, and half wondered why they brought him so little pleasure. If he had not taken off his coat and boots he would have made an errand into the street and dropped into his club, where he was sure of meeting half a dozen jolly fellows, and hearing only cheerful and pleasant things. But only that night as he walked through the gathering twilight, the days of his courtship and early married life, the long evenings he and Mary had spent in reading Milton and Homer and Scott and Bacon and Thackeray and Dickens; how he had dreamed that she would always be his chosen intellectual companion, no less than the partner of his life; but now she seemed settling into a mere nursery maid, a hum-drum housekeeper, a good seamstress, with no other thought than to provide for the physical well-being of her household. What could he do about it? He would buy the new magazine and read aloud to her, and see if they couldn't have a taste of the old, sweet wine of their early companionship.

So, as she took up a new embroidered sack she was making for the baby, he opened to a story, and asked her if she would like to hear it. Why, yes, she'd be very glad to; she got so little time to open a book, hardly.

Frank was soon in the midst of the story, but when he read a gorgeous description of the boudoir of their heroine, Mary interrupted him:

"That makes me think, Frank, that we must have a new carpet for our best chamber; that's been on the floor ever since we were married, and its all all faded; it will do very well for one of the other bed rooms, but I think we must have a new carpet for that room and curtains to match; you know carpets are cheap now. I saw an elegant ingrain at Sloan's last week, just the thing and it wouldn't cost over 50 dollars; this room isn't very large."

"You shall have it," said Frank, as he went on with his reading. Presently he looked up inquiringly to Mary and said: "Doesn't this spirited fellow remind you of Tom Bowling, my old college chum—your cousin Tom, you know!" seeing that Mary looked a little doubtful.

"Why, yes, I guess he does," said Mary, who had been thinking, not of the story, but how she would arrange the new curtains, and embroider a toilet set to match the carpet.

It was easy enough to see that the reading would be a failure; and when the story was completed, Frank reclined on the lounge and read to himself. "Its no use," he thought, "I can't get her interested in anything but trifles, and I'll go back to my club."

So, on the plea of business, Frank absented himself more and more from home, until he rarely spent an evening with Mary, unless visitors were present. And she, absorbed in her domestic cares, careful for his physical comfort, unconscious that they were so rapidly growing apart, gave herself more and more to her household duties, and the oversight of her children.

Handsome children they were, and Mrs. Merwin must see that in dress and manners they were no whit behind their neighbors. Though she had a sewing machine, her needle was constantly in use while her husband was at home, embroidering or finishing the garments she had prepared in his absence. In case there was nothing else the crochet or tatting needle filled up all intervals.

"Abominable crochet—horrid tatting," Frank would say to himself, until all the paraphernalia of tidies and lamp mats, wall baskets and sofa pillows became inexpressibly odious to him. "If Mary would only knit up the raveled sleeve of care which I bring home daily, with kind, personal attention—if she would only give me herself, and let me rest my weary head on her heart. No doubt she loves me, but that love doesn't satisfy me. I want sympathy; I want her to go with me above these low-hung skies of care and petty ambition, into the clear light of those early, happy days, when we read and talked so much together."

CHAPTER II.

A year or two after the opening of our story, Mrs. Merwin, worn with constant confinement, accepted the invitation of an old schoolmate, and, taking Minnie, went to Vermont to pass the warm days of summer. The other children remained at home, with a tried housekeeper, who would be sure to look after them carefully. Frank had a club, and would occasionally come to Vermont to pass the Sabbath during Mrs. Merwin's stay. He had known Mr. Banks, the husband of his wife's friend, in former days, and had professional interchanges of courtesy and business with him, as they were both lawyers; but hitherto there had been no visiting between the families.

On our arrival at her friend's house, Mrs. Merwin was most cordially received, and made to feel quite at home. The years that had separated them since they left school dwindled into nothing, and they soon were interchanging thought and feeling as in long years before, when they walked arm in arm about the play ground of the old academy, or rambled in the park adjoining it. Both had children whom they loved and were proud of; both had indulgent and intellectual husbands; both had beautiful homes. But Mrs. Merwin was not slow to perceive, as they sat together sewing in the cool mornings, that her friend was far above her in sweep of thought and grasp of intellect. She was mortified that of many subjects that came up naturally in the course of conversation she was quite ignorant, and though she could talk fluently in regard to carpets and curtains, embroideries and dress—the latest discoveries of science, the latest achievment of art, the last new books, she knew absolutely nothing about and was dumb when they were mentioned. How did Mrs. Banks manage to keep up with the age, and she so far behind it? Their children were nearly the same in number, their household cares not widely different, their husbands in the same profession. Here was a mystery, and she watched for its solution.

She noticed that at night the young children were put to bed early, before Mr. Banks came home, so the house was quiet; though men who have worked with their muscles all day may love to frolic with their little ones when they came home at night, men whose brains have been taxed during all the business hours of the day, enjoy the most perfect stillness and require it. She noticed, too, that the sewing machine, the work basket, even the knitting work was invisible after nightfall, and however awry or difficult the household arrangement had been during the day, nothing but serenity and cheerfulness shone in the evening parlors. While those of the children who were permitted to appear at the table amused themselves in the dining room or read quietly in the parlor, Mr. and Mrs. Banks gave themselves wholly to themselves and their guest. The news of the day was discussed, the last new book reviewed, while at intervals the conversation dropped into that pleasant small talk which makes up so much of social interchange. Occasionally they passed the evening at a concert or prayer meeting, but Mr. Banks was never at the club, rarely away from home after nightfall.

Many sad misgivings had Mrs. Merwin as she contrasted the perfect mutual interchange between the husband and wife whose guest she was, and her life with her husband; and as she reviewed the years, little by little, light dawned upon her mind. She saw how gradually she had allowed unnecessary industries to encroach on time that might so much better have been devoted to intellectual culture. What availed it now that Mollie and Henry and Willie had been so elaborately dressed in their babyhood? If they had worn plain attire, instead of that on which she had spent so much time and thought, how many hours she might have given to reading and keeping up with her husband! To be sure, her parlors were exquisitely ornamented with a variety of fancy work wrought by her hands; but when she listened to the utterances of her friends, rich as they were with the varied accumulations of those intellectual treasures, the law of whose existence is increment, she felt poor indeed in all the resources most earnestly to be desired. Was it not possible that she and Frank might be all to each other that these two friends are? At any rate she would talk with Mrs. Banks and find out, if she could, just how she had so perfectly won and kept her husband's heart, and how with all the cares of a growing family, she had managed to keep her mind bright and full.

So, one day as they sat together, she introduced the subject cautiously, lest Mrs. Banks might suspect that she and Frank were not so near to each other as they might be.

"I don't see where you get so much time to read and find out everything," said Mrs. Merwin; "you seem to be as fresh as if you had just left school, while I have forgotten almost everything I knew, and yet I don't see but that you have as many cares as I have."

"I neglect a good many things," said Mrs. Banks; "my tidies are all bought, while I dare say you knit yours yourself; my children's clothes are perfectly plain, and so are my own. I've often wanted to ask you where you got so much time to make all the pretty clothes Minnie wears."

"Oh, I make them at night, after the children are quiet; Frank is away at the club, and I have all the evening to sew."

"Mr. Banks doesn't like to have me sew or knit when he is at home; he says it does not seem as though I was entertaining him when I am intent on the needle, and so I've never done it except when compelled to by stress of circumstances."

"And always devote yourself to him as you have done since I've been here?"

"Yes, always; I talk to him or pet him till he's rested, and then he talks to me, tells me all the news, and everything that has happened during the day; sometimes talks over his cases with me. I often find on the envelopes of his letters a memorandum of item to "tell her;" and I often feel as though I have been wherever he has been during the day. If he sees a new picture, he describes it so vividly to me that it's really better than seeing it with my own eyes; and it has been this way ever since we were married, so that I do feel that my mind has grown, almost as much as his, though I have been so full of household and family cares."

Mrs. Merwin sighed audibly, and then came up in memory many a day when Frank had come home weary, and evidently longing for just this exchange of sympathy with his wife. How had it been met? Was there not something better than this laborious superfluity of ornamentation? Could not the tongue and the eye have knitted finer and more valuable fabrics than the busy fingers had done? It was not too late to hope that even now she could win him back again and enjoy the pure content that made her friend's life so blessed. Now was indeed the golden opportunity, and how diligently she improved it. Laying aside the embroideries, on which she had intended to spend so much time, she spent all her leisure time in reading the choice volumes which were discussed in the evening conversations, to renewing her acquaintance with the classics she and Frank had read together, and to writing him long letters full of wifely sympathy in his labors and success, of comment on the books which occupied her thought, and of anticipations of the happy associations they would have when she got home again.

To Mr. Merwin, the occasional Sabbath he spent with Mary seemed like oasis in the desert. Together, as in the days of their courtship and early marriage, with little to interrupt, they slipped back into the old easy interchange of thought and feeling, which clothed those bright days with sunshine and joy. Mary could not rest until she had told her husband all her heart, and how she longed to be to him all that a wife could be, keeping step with him in his intellectual growth, as well as in the shining honors which it brought to him.

"Do you remember," she said, "the letter in which you asked me to be your wife? I committed it to memory at the time, and since I have been here it has all come back to me, especially the passage, 'you would be a companion for me. We would spend our evenings in beautiful readings, in mutual communings with the master spirits of the world.' We will spend them so when I get home, won't we?"

And they did. Whatever annoyances came to Mrs. Merwin in the management of her household, or to Mr. Merwin in the conduct of his business during the day, were not permitted to mar the cheerfulness of their evening reunions. When he came home, exhausted by the unusual labors, the quick eye of his wife read in his face and manner the need of his spirit, and by reason of her perfect sympathy with him, she knew just how to soothe and restore him. Or, if he found her depressed and weary on his return, he, too, extended the hand of ready sympathy, gentle forbearance and cheering words. The club was forgotten for the fireside, the crochet and embroidery needle were forgotten, and yet the children grew as fast, were as rosy and gay as when their loving mother arrayed them in garments covered with choice needle-work. Though silver began to mingle with Mrs. Merwin's chestnut tresses, and crow-feet traced themselves on a face no longer young, Mr. Merwin declared that every year but added to her personal charms, and made her a thousand fold more dear to him than ever. And thus, like the asymptote lines, ever approaching, never to meet, they are going hand in hand to where, though there be a brief parting, they shall live and love forevermore.

West Susquehanna Classis.

This Classis held its annual session in the Reformed church at Bellefonte, Pa., from Wednesday evening, May 21st, to Saturday evening succeeding. The sessions were opened with the classical sermon preached by the retiring president, Rev. James Crawford, of Lewisburg, on St. Math. xxviii-20: "Behold I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." The following members were in attendance upon this meeting: Revs. W. H. Grob, W. W. Clouser, W. A. Haas, Hiram King, J. F. DeLong, James Crawford, J. G. Shoemaker, George P. Hartzell, A. Romich, I. S. Stahr, S. S. Kohler, S. M. Roeder, John Dotterer, D. G. Klein, D. M. Wolf, W. M. Landis and A. C. Whitmer. Elders: Daniel Heckman, Charles Moyer, Philip Moyer, John Hoffer, Carl Volkmer, Philip Frederick, Andrew Stover, Samuel Kryder, Wm. H. Beck, Edward Smith, John K. Runkle, Jonas Hoy and Col. H. Royer.

OFFICERS.

Rev. W. W. Clouser was elected president for the ensuing year. He took the chair with a few appropriate remarks, thanking Classis for the honor conferred upon him, and bespeaking the indulgence and hearty co-operation of the brethren in conducting the business to a speedy conclusion.

Rev. W. A. Haas was re-elected Secretary and Treasurer by acclamation.

Rev. S. M. Roeder was elected corresponding Secretary.

PAROCHIAL REPORTS.

Each minister is required to read a parochial report, giving an account of his ministerial labors the past year, and the condition of his charge. The reports were generally full of sunshine. Charges are mostmostly in a thriving condition. Death has not entered the priestly ranks of the ministers the past year. No one has been interrupted in his arduous, yet glorious work, by the withering touch of disease. Goodness and mercy have closely pursued all throughout the year, and the Lord has established the work of their hands upon them. All success ascribed to His furthering grace. "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it. Except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain." Heaven has also smiled kindly upon the people represented by this classical meeting. The Lord has granted favorable weather, so that the kindly fruits of the earth could ripen. Health and plenty, the two cardinal blessings, have cheered all our people. A cheerful faith, a joyful hope and a peaceful love, are generally characterizing the congregations of the Classis.

The Classis embraces Snyder, Union, Centre and a part of Lycoming and Juniata counties. It has 18 ministers, 54 congregations, 4,418 church members. During the past year there were baptized 271 infants and 28 adults; 243 confirmed, 103 received by certificate, 3,892 communed, 74 dismissed, 26 had their names erased, 107 died, 48 Sunday-schools, 2,785 S. S. scholars, $1,317 benevolent contributions, $15,097.00 was paid for congregational purposes, 3 students for the ministry.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

On Thursday evening a missionary meeting was held and the following subjects discussed: The Foreign Missionary Field, opened by Rev. James Crawford. The Foreign Missionary Field, opened by Rev. I. S. Stahr. The methods of raising Missionary Funds, opened by Rev. A. C. Whitmer. Short addresses were also made by Revs. W. A. Haas, J. F. DeLong, W. H. Grob and Geo. P. Hartzell. The meeting was a very interesting one, and it is to be hoped that it may have awakened new missionary zeal and spirit in the hearts of all present.

On Friday evening a Sunday-school meeting was observed. The subject: "The Constituent Elements of the Teacher," was discussed by Rev. Hartzell and others. Rev. S. M. Roeder spoke on the relation of the parents of the congregation to the Sunday-school. The meeting was full of interest and good hints were thrown out by the speakers.

Services preparatory to the Lord's supper were held on Saturday afternoon. Rev. W. W. Clouser preached the sermon. The holy communion was celebrated, and Rev. A. C. Whitmer preached the sermon. The occasion was solemn. On Sunday evening the Rev. J. G. Shoemaker preached in the Reformed. The pulpits of the Methodist, Presbyterian and Lutheran churches were filled by members of Classis on Sunday.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. H. King and the Bellefonte charge was dissolved. Rev. King was then, at his own request, dismissed to the Philadelphia Classis.

Rev. John Dotterer was, at his own request, dismissed to the Classis of Westmoreland.

Mr. S. P. Brown, from the Theological Seminary, at Lancaster, and Mr. F. W. Brown, from the Theological Seminary at Mercersburg, sustained satisfactory examinations before a committee appointed by Classis, and were licensed to preach the Gospel. The former was commended to the Board of Missions as a person willing and well calculated for missionary work in the West.

The pastor of the congregation at Williamsport was directed to supply the St. Peter's congregation in Nippanose Valley, and the St. John's congregation in Black Deer Valley, the ensuing year.

The following action was adopted:

WHEREAS, The Missionary Superintendent informs Classis, that the receipts of the Board of Home Missions are materially less than last year, and the treasury empty with the salaries of most of the missionaries in arrears for six months or more.

Resolved, That it be recommended to pastors, where practicable, to hold harvest festivals of several services by the assistance of neighboring brethren, and that all pastors be instructed to devote the harvest collections of the present year to the benefit of the board.

Resolved, That the pastors of the various charges be directed to take up a collection in the month of January for Foreign Missions.

The Tohickon Classis, in whose bounds Rev. Father Yearick labored till he became disabled by age and bodily affliction, pledged itself to two hundred dollars annually towards his support, as long as it shall be deemed necessary. It also suggests in an official communication that this Classis do something, as having like interest in the fruits of his labors. The paper on the case was referred to a special committee, which offered the following report adopted by Classis:

The case is one which calls for sympathy, prayer and material aid. It is the opinion of your committee that this Classis, within whose bounds Brother Yearick labored for many years, and so successfully, should feel herself bound to do what she can to afford him relief in his affliction and need. But inasmuch as we do not deem it inexpedient to name any sum to be apportioned among the different charges, we would offer the following for your action:

Resolved, That we commend him to the sympathy and prayer of all our people.

Resolved, That immediately an opportunity be given to all the members of Classis to pledge themselves for such amounts as they are willing to contribute for his relief during the present classical year.

The following amounts were pledged: Boalsburg charge, $10; White Deer, $5; Selinsgrove, $5; Williamsport, $8; Lewisburg, $5; Aaronsburg, $7; Rebersburg, $10; Nittany, $10; Lock Haven, $3; Centre Hall, $5; New Berlin, $3; Mifflinburg, $10; D. M. Wolf, $2; D. S. Klein, $1.

The clerk was instructed to solicit something from those charges not present when the pledges were taken. The money is to be paid to the treasurer of Classis.

The following delegates were elected to represent this Classis on the floor of Synod to meet at Lebanon in September next.

Primarii—Revs. D. M. Wolf, J. F. DeLong and I. S. Stahr.

Secundi—Revs. James Crawford, Geo. P. Hartzell and W. A. Haas.

Elders Primarii—Philip Frederick, Jonas Hoy and Carl Volkmer.

Elders Secundi—John R. Runkle, Samuel Kryder and Edward Smith.

The next annual sessions of Classis will be held in the Reformed church at Rebersburg, Centre county, Pa., on the third Wednesday of May, 1880, at 7½ o'clock, P. M.

Bellefonte, the place of this meeting of Classis, is a singularly, romantic town. It is literally a town that hath foundations, being built upon a congregation of everlasting hills. The brows of some of these hills are crowned with the most gorgeous residences. The large, cool, crystal, spring (Belle Fonte) in the centre of the town is truly one of nature's wonders. Like this large, free, perennial spring, so is the hospitality of the people. It was good and pleasant to abide among such a people during our sojourn. The following action is a feeble expression of what the hearts of the members of Classis felt:

Resolved, That this Classis returns its hearty thanks to the families of the Reformed and other churches in this place, who have so kindly and hospitably entertained the members of Classis during our sojourn among them; and that the pastor here be requested to read this resolution from the pulpit, and have it inserted in the papers of this place.

How an Old Darkey Cured Himself of Hydrophobia.

An occurrence of a strange character happened at the county poorhouse this week. A negro man, an inmate of that institution, had for several days appeared to be in his usual good health, when suddenly feeling the symtoms of an attack, he would inform the keeper, who would confine him in a room where he could do no injury to any one. In an hour or two his muscles would begin to twitch, beginning in the palm of his right hand, where he had been bitten by a dog when nine years of age (he is now twenty-one,) thence running up the arm until the whole of his right side would be affected. He would then writhe about, foaming at the mouth, growl, bark, snap and bite at anything within his reach, at times tearing his own flesh. Once or twice he escaped from his cell, scattering the inmates, who were very much afraid of him at this time. The poor fellow was crippled in both legs, but when under these spells he was as active as a panther and fully as dangerous. Several days since, during a lucid interval, he told Mr. Cook, the superintendent, that he had dreamed if he could get a certain weed, which grew in a certain portion of the farm (which he never seen,) and eat it, he would recover. To humor the poor fellow Mr. Cook allowed him to go and get the weed, which he did, and ate it, saying at the time it was of very strange taste. After eating a small quantity he fell asleep, and awoke feeling quite well; as he announced "never better." Mr. Cook says he has never shown a symtom of hydrophobia since eating the weed. The physicians, who have always adhered to the hydrophobia idea, have tried to find out from the fellow what sort of weed he used, but without success, as he says he could not find any more of it, and that he would not be able to identify it if he should find it. Whether his cure is permanent or not, time alone will tell; but it is certain that he now appears to be sound in health, without a symtom of the horrible attacks formerly of daily occurrence.—Parkersburg (West Va.,) Cincinnati Commercial.

True affection grows stronger as it grows older.

A gentlemanly-looking person was recently, at his own request, shown through the Indiana State Prison. He seemed much pleased, and said on leaving: "You see, I have been sentenced for two years here, and as I'm afraid they won't give me the new trial I have moved for, I thought I'd just come and see what sort of place it is." His fears proved to have been well founded, and he is now a regular boarder of that institution.

It cures Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Facegrubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ringworm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood, and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions. It promotes energy and strength. It restores and preserves health. It infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair, who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial. Remember, the earlier the trial, the speedier the cure.

Its recipe has been furnished to physicians everywhere; and they, recognizing its superior qualities, administer it in their practice.

For nearly forty years AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has been widely used, and it now possesses the confidence of millions of people who have experienced benefits from its marvellous curative virtues.

SELECT LIST
—OF—
LOCAL NEWSPAPERS
Many persons suppose this list to be composed of Cheap, low-priced newspapers. The fact is quite otherwise. The Catalogue states exactly what the papers are. When the name of a paper is printed in FULL FACE TYPE it is in every instance the BEST paper in the place. When printed in CAPITALS it is the ONLY paper in the place. When printed in roman letters it is neither the best nor the only paper, but is usually a very good one, notwithstanding. The list gives the population of every town, and the circulation of every paper. It is not a CO-OPERATIVE LIST. It is not a CHEAP LIST. At the foot of the catalogue for each State the important towns which are not covered by the list are enumerated. It is an HONEST LIST. The rates charged for advertising are barely one-fifth the publisher's schedule. The price for one inch four weeks in the entire list is $635. The regular rates of the papers for the same space and time are $3,136 55. The list includes 970 newspapers, of which 163 are issued daily and 807 weekly. They are located in 825 different cities and towns, of which 22 are State Capitals, 328 places of over 5,000 population, and 444 County Seats. Lists sent on application. Address GEO. P. ROWELL & CO.'S Newspaper Advertising Bureau, 10 Spruce St., (Printing House Square,) New York. 10 33 1y

We refer to the German-American National Bank, Washington, D. C.; the Royal Swedish, Norwegian, and Danish Legations, at Washington; Hon. Joseph Casey, late Chief Justice U. S. Good-Bye!

A trifle over a year ago we assumed the duties of Associate Editor of the REPUBLICAN, and now, after so short a time, we are called by what seems to be the "eternal fitness of things," (we like the bright side of things, and hence say "fitness") to fill a place of even greater responsibility.

With this issue, therefore, we say good-bye to the REPUBLICAN and its numerous readers. Not, however, without feelings of regret because we had not the ability to serve both in a more acceptable manner, and that the pleasant associations formed during the year must, in a measure at least, be severed.

We have tried to make the REPUBLICAN a good local newspaper by giving to the public everything that occurred which we thought would be of interest. The county has not been neglected altogether, for we have encouraged the sending in of accounts of matter-of-fact occurrences exclusively. Politics and general news have also received our attention, but other duties prevented us from doing as good service in these departments as desirable.

We are largely indebted to the people of Bellefonte and vicinity in general, and the business men particularly, for much of the success which has attended our efforts. The county and borough officials, members of the legal, medical, ministerial and industrial professions, have alike been courteous and obliging in imparting such information as we needed. For these favors we are thankful.

That the REPUBLICAN and its patrons may share the benefits of the gradual revival of business, which is surely taking place throughout the length and breadth of our great country, is the heartiest wish of

Yours, respectfully,
A. S. GROW.

Additional Local Matters.

—Best two for five cent cigars in town at Haupt's cigar store.

—The last train over the road last Saturday night broke one of the steel rails near the switch that runs into Crider's lumber yard.

—Mr. Wm. Wolf had a cow run over yesterday morning by the passenger train from Tyrone. Its back was broken, and otherwise so badly injured that it had to be killed.

—Rev. Bingham, of the Lincoln University, Va., occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church last Sunday morning, in the absence of Rev. Laurie, and Mr. Beach, formerly of this place, but who is now studying for the ministry, preached in the evening.

—Officer Tully clubbed Roundsman Orr, one of the "finest police in the world," in New York yesterday so satisfactorily that he was sent to the hospital. We are advised that if Roundsman Orr had lived on Sechler's meat, he would have been better able to handle his antagonist.

—Our fellow-townsman, Bond Valentine, Esq., who has for some time been prominent in the insurance business—both life and fire insurance—is steadily adding to the list of companies in which he will insure. The latest addition to his companies is that of the Union Fire Insurance Company of Philadelphia. This company is one of the most conservative and reliable in our State. It has been presided over for many years by that worthy representative of Philadelphia's best men, Richard S. Smith, and a board of directors who, like himself, have ever held their word as good as their bond. Our farmers and business men will not go amiss in taking risk in the old Union.

Afraid She'd be Kissed.

A man was once walking along one road and a woman along another. The two roads finally united, and man and woman reaching the junction at the same time, walked from there together. The man was carrying a large iron kettle on his back, in one hand he held by the legs a live chicken, in the other a cane, and he was leading a goat. Just as they were coming to a dark, deep ravine, the woman said to the man: "I'm afraid to go through that ravine with you; it is a lonely place, and you might overpower me and kiss me by force."

"If you were afraid of that," said the man, "you shouldn't have walked with me at all. How can I possibly overpower you and kiss you by force when I have this great iron kettle on my back, a cane in one hand and a live chicken in the other, and am leading this goat? I might as well be tied hand and foot."

"Yes," replied the woman, "but if you should stick your cane into the ground and tie the goat to it, and turn the kettle bottom side up and put the chicken into it, then you might wickedly kiss me, in spite of my resistance."

"Success to thy ingenuity, O woman!" said the rejoicing man to himself. "I should never have thought of such an expedient."

And when they came to the ravine he stuck his cane into the ground and tied the goat to it, gave the chicken to the woman, saying: "Hold it while I cut some grass for the goat;" and, then lowering the kettle from his shoulders, imprisoned the chicken under it, and wickedly kissed the woman, as she was afraid he would.

General News.

Last Friday afternoon a messenger boy was knocked down and robbed of about $10,000 in money in Chicago. The robbers have been captured.

On Wednesday night last, at Los Veges, Cal., an Italian who last fall murdered a Frenchman and a Mexican woman, and who was sentenced to be hanged, but was allowed a new trial, and a Mexican who on Wednesday murdered a man, were taken from jail and hanged in the public square by citizens.

As Mrs. Honora Lacy was driving to her home in Chester county, last Saturday evening, the contents of the carriage, cotton and straw, were ignited by a match, and in an instant the whole interior of the vehicle was in a blaze. The horse was frightened and ran away, and before it could be stopped Mrs. Lacy was roasted alive.

Elijah Smith, aged twenty, who says his home is in Milburn, N. Y., was arrested in New Haven, Conn., on the 7th inst., for attempting to poison Philo Crofut and family, with whom he was hired, putting strychnine in the breakfast coffee Saturday. He confessed his guilt, giving as a reason his hatred for Crofut's son, who had reproved him for keeping late hours.

The Old Oaken Bucket.

"The Old Oaken Bucket" was written fifty or more years ago by a printer named Samuel Woodworth. He was in the habit of dropping into a noted drinking saloon kept by one Mallory. One day, after drinking a glass of brandy and water, he smacked his lips and declared that Mallory's brandy was superior to any drink he had every tasted.

"No," said Mallory, you are mistaken. There was a drink which in both our estimations far surpassed this."

"What was that?" incredulously asked Woodworth

"The fresh spring water we used to drink from the old oaken bucket that hung in the well, after returning from the fields on a sultry day."

"Very true," replied Woodworth, tear drops glistening in his eyes. Returning to his printing office, he seated himself at his desk and began to write. In half an hour was embalmed in an inspiring song that has become as familiar as a household word.

"The old oaken bucket, the iron-bound bucket,
The moss-covered bucket that hung in the well"

FACTS ABOUT MEXICO.—There is a high civilization in Mexico among a certain class. All the people, high and low, are outwardly polite. All the rich people dress with taste and live well. The restaurants in the capital are as good as ours—often better. The barber shops, if slow, are good—the Mexicans, like the French, are good shavers and haircutters when they to do it. There are as many lines of street cars, and as good, in the city of Mexico as there are in St. Louis. The capital contains 220,000 people; Leon, 120,000 Puebla 90,000; Guanajuato, 60,000; Guadolajara, 60,000; Queretaro, 59,000; San Luis Potosi, 40,000, and the cities of Zacatecas, Aguascalients, Lagos, Durango, Saltillo, Monterey, Monclova, Cuerrevace, Jalapa, Vera Cruz, Orizaba, Aacpulco and Chihuahua, average from 30,000 to 10,000. There are many more of the same class, but I cannot enumerate them here. The cities are not built of adobe but of stone, and of right solid stone, too. They never get on fire. Nobody ever heard of a Mexican city being burned down.—Chicago Times.

The Field of Politics.

The assassin of the Democratic party is named Fourpercent.

There is a growing suspicion that Beck has been foully dealt with.

Tilden will see to it that Ewing's presidential aspirations are nipped by defeat.

And yet fiat money will not pay the expenses of the Bourbon campaign in Ohio.

R. B. Stone, Esq., of Eldred, McKean county, will be a candidate for State Senator this fall.

Spofford's sample witness shows that he has struck the same old vein of double barrelled swearers.

TOO LAZY.—A veracious and amusing anecdote of the late Asa Otis has just come to light. He was at one of the fish markets on the wharf clad in his customary overalls and as ever unassuming in his deportment, when the captain of a sinking vessel rushed to the shore, and, seizing Mr. Otis by the shoulder, shouted:

"Say, old man, quick! Do you want a job?"

Mr. Otis looked at him a little surprised and turned away, whereupon the persistent captain followed him up and again demanded: "Say, you, don't you want a job to pump out my vessel?" but Mr. Otis remained unreplying, at which the exasperated captain exclaimed: "Well, old chap, if you are too lazy to work you will die in the poor house, surer than thunder."

The quiet man in his overalls was then the owner of more than three millions of dollars.—New London Telegram.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

New Books.

John H. Holtzinger, Esq., of Huntingdon, Pa., agent for the book-publishing house of Sower, Potts & Co., Philadelphia, has placed us under obligations for two new books, viz: "Common School Literature" and "How to Write Letters." both by J. Willis Westlake, of the State Normal School, Millersville, Pa.

The "Common School Literature" is a small but well-bound volume, costing only 60 cents. We have examined it thoroughly, and are of the opinion that a better arranged or more complete work of the kind is not extant. Part I. treats of the literature of England from Chaucer, in 1350, to the poets and prose writers of 1875.

Part II. relates to the literature of America and covers a period of from 1640, when the first book—the Bay Psalm Book—was printed on this side the Atlantic, down to 1875.

"How to Write Letters" is really a valuable work. Too many are almost totally unlearned in this very important branch. There are school teachers by the score who, if called upon, could not address properly a letter to the most menial civil officer. The sooner this book finds its way into the hands of our children, the sooner will they learn to write letters correctly.

DRUGGIST AND PHYSICIAN.—A physician complaining bitterly of dull times, went to his druggist to find out the reason why, at this season of the year, his practice was not so extensive as formerly; also to find out what inducements his brother medico offered to attract away his patients. He was startled when his druggist answered as follows: "Doctor, coughs and colds are very prevalent, but everyone is purchasing Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar, and recover so rapidly that there is no necessity for calling in a physician. Again, the reason that Dr. F., on —th street, is having so many patients, is owing to the frankness he adopted in prescribing in every case of coughs, colds, etc., a bottle of Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar, and finding it successful, he has concluded in future that all his patients, when troubled with any disease of the lungs, shall immediately commence taking Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar."

The druggist's advice was snapped, and the almost discouraged physician now is considered a successful practitioner. His claims are based upon the virtue of the medicine he adopts, which in all cases is Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. Sold by all druggists. Depot, 7 Sixth Avenue, New York City. C. N. Crittenton, sole proprietor. Price 50 cents and $1. Large size much the cheapest.

Farm and Fireside.

What Garden Have You?

The best paying plot on any farm, and the one yielding the most enjoyment, too, is the Vegetable Garden—or "Kitchen Garden," as it is frequently called, and quite appropriately, especially when the "kitchen folks" have the chief or sole care of it. A good supply of garden products for the table costs less than the standard bread, meat and potatoes, is more healthful and nourishing than all corn beef, salt pork, and the small assortment usually found on the farmer's table. Need we add anything about palatableness, comfort, home enjoyment? Contrast a table set nearly the year round with bread, salt pork, corned beef, potatoes, boiled cabbage, varied with hash, mush, buckwheats, and occasionally a few other items, with a table well supplied in succession and abundantly with asparagus, green peas, lima beans, spring beans, sweet corn, radishes, carrots, beets, parsnips, celery, salsify, turnips, cauliflower, spinach, Lettuce, egg plants, tomatoes (all the year), rhubarb, okra, squashes, onions, cabbage, cucumbers (?), and other things—filled in with currants, strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, not to mention grapes, pears, etc. We do not accept the standing excuse, "I am too poor, too hard driven, too much to do in my fields, to bother with the garden." We repeat, with emphasis, that every farmer can have most, if not all the above pleasant and healthful variety with less labor and less expense than the table can be supplied in any other way. Every day's work in the garden will produce several dollars' worth of good things. One quarter of an acre, more or less, according to the size of the family, will suffice. Select the best soil available, as near the house as possible, but at a distance if absolutely necessary. A good loam where water never stands is desirable. Heavy clay will not do well without a good deal of preparation. If not naturally dry, underdraining is desirable, but even an open ditch around the plot, and one or two through it if needed, may answer for the present. Plow and harrow fine, working in a liberal supply of the best well rotted manure that can be obtained—half a wagon load on every square rod will be all the better, but much less can be got along with. The directions for planting, cultivation, etc., are given in our "Hints for Work," from time to time, beginning back to the February number. For the best varieties of vegetables, see article on page 84 of March number.—From American Agriculturist for April.

A Hint to Butter Makers.

The Farmington, Conn., creamery sends its butter to market in tin cans with tightly fitting covers: each can contains seventy pounds made up into pound rolls. The rolls are placed on pans, and these are set one above the other, five tiers in all, and when put in just fill the can so that each pan and each roll are held snugly in position. Two strong hasps hold the cover on, and the bottom of the pans fitting down on the top of the rolls keep them in position so that they do not move, and it makes no difference whether the can is upside down or not, so far as they are concerned. The rolls are kept from rubbing or chafing by being wrapped in thin muslin. The express on one of the cans from Farmington to New York and return is $1. The butter sold readily at 33 cents (wholesale), when "good, square butter," as the consignee said, was commanding but 15 cents. The rolls are made long enough to cut in two for the table, and are plain, with no device stamped on them. This is a cheap and handy way to prepare butter for market, and in form ready for use. The butter was fresh and uniform—excellent qualities for which good creameries excel.

Re-Grafting Pear Trees.

The old butter pear often cracks its fruit so badly, and other kinds are found so desirable, that it is worth remembering that they may all be regrafted with other kinds in the spring. Some fancy that budding in the summer is preferable to spring grafting. It might be of interest, says the Gardners' Monthly, to some of our readers for me to describe a method of overworking some Flemish Beauty pear trees, upon which the fruit cracked so badly as to render them worthless. Last summer in the budding season, I budded all over the trees into all the limbs which I thought would form a perfect head. The buds all "took," and the present season have grown remarkable. To be sure this is no new discovery, but very many fruit growers think that there is no way to work over a large tree except the old fashioned mode of cleft grafting, and which often produces unseemly gashes upon the tree, which it takes a number of years for the tree to overcome. Hence I speak of this method of budding into the limb, and think it may be of service to some who, like me, are troubled with several worthless varieties of the pear that are rendered so by cracking.

Two darkies were vaunting their courage. "Isn't 'feared o' nothin' I isn't," said one. "Den, Sam, I reckon you isn't 'feared to lend me a dollar?" "No, Julus, I isn't 'feared to loan you a dollah, but I hate to part wid an ole fren' forebber."

A TRIP TO CENTRE HALL.

A Beautiful Drive—Its People, and the Business of the Place.

No one, perhaps, could find a more lovely or interesting drive, nor spend their time to a much better advantage, than to leave Bellefonte early in the day and drive to the top of Nittany mountain and thence to Centre Hall. All the beauty of Nature there seems spread before one in a grand panorama, and one's bosom swells with admiration at the loveliness and grandeur with which the Great Creator appears to have been so lavish in this region.

Leaving Bellefonte at 7 o'clock, and driving out the road made famous by high rates of toll toward Pleasant Gap, which point we reached about 8 o'clock, we began the ascent of Nittany mountain from the west side. Driving slowly, we have time to behold everything as we pass along. The drive from the Gap to the summit of the mountain is somewhat hard—the grade being very heavy. At last we reach the top. Here Nature arrays herself in her pretties garb, and smiles upon all. Only the man who is too dull to admire anything fails to admire the loveliness here revealed. Were the view here presented to the eye of the wistful sight-seeker transferred to canvas, it would be deemed too highly colored to represent reality.

Leaving here, we begin the descent. The grade on this side is so heavy that one is ushered into Centre Hall before he scarcely realizes that he has left the top of the mountain. Centre Hall is a beautiful little village, and contains about five hundred people. Its most attractive feature is white-washed hitching-posts and town pumps. Its people, generally, are of a social, friendly nature, and not a few are of an inteligent proclivity. But Centre Hall is notable, also, for its Democratic majority at every election, regardless of whom or what the character of the candidate upon the ticket may be, and when we make the statement that not a few of its citizens are possessed of more than average intelligence, its paraphrase is necessary in order to determine which side of the house they belong. We were confidentially informed, by one of her most reliable citizens, that at every election there could be men found still voting for Andrew Jackson. Doubtless if the immortal "Andy" were still living, he could find men in Centre Hall willing and ready to seize the helm of his political boat and steer her (but we doubt the safety) through the seas of political dissention.

Centre Hall is (be it said to the glory of the place) the dry goods clerks' paradise. On almost any fine day at least a score of these gentlemen can be seen strung along the curb in rather an unseemly posture indulging in social and friendly tete-a-tete—discussing, perhaps, the prospects of the coming crops, or the effects upon the Eastern markets in case of a failure in the pork production of Penns Valley, or determining the exact geographical location of a certain membrane requisite in the human construction (of the latter, rarely).

But Centre Hall is not behind in matters of business affair. Its business men, with but a few exceptions, are live and energetic fellows. It has a number of good dry goods and grocery stores, a bank, a drug store, hardware store, jewelry store, barber shop, and a brass band! The chief industry of the place, however, is the manufacture of carriages, buggies etc., and the manufacture and sale of agricultural implements. Our live Republican friend, Mr. J. A. Fleming, is the dealer in agricultural implements, and of which he sells all kinds. There are two carriage manufacturing establishments in the place, and managed respectively by, Mr. John Lee and Mr. Levi Murray, both of whom are live and energetic men, and turn out work at such prices as defy competition. We were shown through these establishments, and the facilities for doing work are complete. We are of the opinion that the people of Bellefonte would find it greatly to their advantage if before purchasing their fashionable "rigs" in Philadelphia they would call on these parties, as we are confident they can turn out jobs fully rivaling any city work, both in regard to durability and fine finish.

Antiquity-hunters can find in Centre Hall a rare gem, in the shape of a large, old-fashioned corner clock, which bears the date 1767. It is said that this clock was made by the great-grandfather of our townsman, D. S. Keller, Esq. Mr. John Kennedy is the fortunate possessor of this rare piece of antiquity.

We had the pleasure of taking by the hand our old Republican friends, Col. Andrew Gregg, Joseph Shirk, Dr. W. A. Jacobs, J. O. Deininger, J. Holdeman, James Boal and John W. Henney, together with many others. They all appeared to accept the political situation of Penns Valley good-naturedly, and gave us the assurance that they would try to elevate the political intelligence of the average Democratic voter of that valley. Work on, gentlemen! Success may attend you, however hopeless it may now appear!

The Fire at Hagerstown, Md.

The Washington Hotel entirely consumed by fire, May 27th, 1879.

Mr. Kyle, salesman of agricultural implements for D. M. Osborn & Co., of the city of Philadelphia, and who is well known throughout Centre county arrived here last night and gave a graphic description of the fire, and his narrow escape, which we are happy to congratulate him in. Mr. Kyle was sleeping on the first story of the hotel, and was aroused by the cry of fire. He immediately seized some of his clothing, and when he got into the passage-way found his escape by the stairway cut off, but succeeded in making his escape in the rear of the building. Mr. Kyle says the ladies acted with deliberation and coolness—a remark that would not apply to all men.

The proprietors took a position at a point leading to the kitchen and calmly directed the fleeing guests to the rear, which appeared the best way of escape.

A girl of twelve years of age had safely let herself down the columns of the piazza of the two upper stories, when she fell, striking a man as she reached the ground and breaking his leg.

Mr. W. Bray, a traveling agent, was awakened by a feeling of suffocation, and getting up, he looked at his watch and noticed that it was 2.35 A. M. As he suffers with asthma, he did not attribute the suffocation to any other cause, nor did he notice the glare outside. After noticing the time, he turned to go to sleep again, when, in a few moments, he was aroused by the flames in his room. Jumping from bed he seized his vest, in the pockets of which were his watch and a considerable sum of money: taking his valise and pants in hand, he rushed into the corridor. Upon reaching the stairway he found it one sheet of fire. He then turned and ran down the corridor which was filled with smoke, and reaching the back stairway, where the landlady and her daughters were coming up for the third time in their efforts to escape. He urged them to go with him. Seeing a window open on the third story, he jumped through it into the court-yard, the ladies passing out through the kitchen. Another gentleman stood cooly at a window on the fourth floor with a valise in hand until a ladder was put up for his succor. And still another rolled himself up in some bedding and let himself drop out of a window into a small street where he was afterwards found considerably stunned. At first it was not known that this bundle of bedding contained so valuable freight and was therefore neglected.

Mr. Kyle lost a valuable gold watch, forty dollars in money, and many valuable papers, with nearly all his clothing.

Many heartrending scenes were witnessed which space and time will not permit to mention, details of which have already reached you.

The building was insured in many companies. X.

Where Some of the Centre County Boys Stop while in Paris.

We were agreeably surprised several days ago to welcome our friend and schoolmate, J. W. Heston, of the State College, who paid us a flying visit to the Columbia House (situated on Broad St. above Arch), while on his return home from the Young Men's "Cris" Association Convention held at Baltimore. Also, Reuben Spangler, who hales from the stone mansion as Deputy Sheriff, favored us with his presence for several days, and in the meantime not forgetting to take in "Pinafore," which is being played at the North Broad St. Theatre. This opera, although plain and simple, is drawing immense crowds and giving universal satisfaction. It has now reached its 120th performance but expects to close with the 125th.

Dr. Neff and daughter, of Centre Hall, spent several days with us at Columbia House. H. Van Pelt, of Bellefonte, who is a great friend of pedestrians, and who, as well as myself, took great interest in the match at the Industrial Art Building several weeks ago. He should be in the city now, as there are no less than three matches in progress this week. Nine pedestrians are walking at the Industrial Building for a purse of one thousand dollars. This, with the horse racing going on in the various parks constitute the principal amusements, as the theatres are about closing for the season, and the actors, with the mass of other pleasure-seekers, are off for the sea shore.

The Times copies the following Washington despatch to the Enquirer, entitled "The Republicans sick of Yocum:" The Republican journals and politicians throughout the interior of the Keystone State are very actively expressing their dissatisfaction at the conduct of Representative Yocum in Congress, and in their letters to influential party men here boldly say that the action of Mr. Yocum in uniting with the Democrats in sustaining the vote of Congress over the Presidential veto has left them without a choice, and they see no reason why ex-Governor Curtin should not be speedily seated if the testimony justifies it. They believe the ex-Governor would represent the Commonwealth with dignity and wisdom, and his ability as an orator would give some benefit where party lines are not drawn, while Mr. Yocum has yielded to a desire to conciliate the Democrats by voting with them against the Republicans who voted for him in good faith. The case will be heard in a very short time.

The work at the Public Buildings is progressing slowly, and it will, no doubt, be many years before they will be completed. It is nothing unusual to see teams of sixteen to eighteen horses drawing one solid block of marble for this fine edifice, which proves that when done it will be one of the finest of the kind in America, if not in the world. We are lost in thought at the ingenuity of man in the erection of this vast structure, as well as in that of other things of equal invention and greatness.

Philadelphia, May 30, 1879.

New Bill for Counting the Presidential Vote.

The House committee on the state of the law respecting the ascertainment and declaration of the result of the election of President and Vice President, have agreed upon a bill, and authorized Representative Bicknell, the chairman, to report to the House, with the approval of the committee. The title and provisions of the measure are as follows:

A bill to amend sundry provisions of chapter 1, title 3, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to Presidential elections, and to provide for and regulate the counting of the votes for President and Vice-President, and the decision of questions arising thereon.

First—Electors of President and Vice President are to be appointed in each State on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November.

Second—They vote by ballot on the second Monday in December next after their appointment.

Third—They make three certificates, one of them to be delivered to the President of the Senate, by special messenger, before the second Monday in January then next, another to be sent to him by mail forthwith, and the third to be delivered forthwith to the District Judge of the district in which they meet.

Fourth—If the certificate is not received by the President of the Senate on or before the second Monday in January, he must notify the Secretary of State forthwith, who shall send a special messenger to the District Judge for the certificate deposited with him.

Fifth—Controversies as to electoral votes in any State may be passed upon by its highest judicial tribunal, who shall send its decision, under seal, to the President of the Senate.

Sixth—Both Houses of Congress shall meet on the second Monday in February next after the meeting of the electors. The President of the Senate shall preside. Two tellers shall be appointed by the Senate, and two by the House.

Seventh—The President of the Senate shall open all the certificates, and all the votes shall be counted by the two Houses in the alphabetical order of the States as certified, unless rejected by both Houses. If there be a controversy in any State and a certified decision of it by its highest judicial tribunal, the electoral votes of that State shall be counted in accordance therewith, unless the decision be reversed by both Houses. If there be a controversy and no such judicial decision, the contested votes shall not be counted unless both Houses concur therein. If there be conflicting judicial decisions or conflicting certificates, the decision or certificate held by both Houses to be given by the proper authority shall be conclusive unless rejected by both Houses.

Eighth—The tellers make a list of the votes as counted and the President of the Senate announces the result, and said announcement, with a list of the votes, shall be entered on the journal of each House.

Ninth—On opening any certificate the President of the Senate calls for objections. Objections must be in writing, brief, without argument, and signed by one Senator and one Representative. Objections are decided separately by each House, the Senate withdrawing. During the meeting of the two Houses the presiding officer shall have power to preserve order, and no debate shall be allowed.

Tenth—In the separate meetings to decide upon objections, each Senator or Representative may speak five minutes, and once only; and after two hours of such debate the main question shall be put.

Eleventh—The joint meeting shall not be dissolved until the count shall be completed. No recess shall be taken except upon a question arising under this act, in which case either House, acting separately, may take a recess of such House not beyond the next day; but if the count be not completed before the first meeting no further or other recess shall be taken by either House.

Twelfth—Sections 131, 135, 136, 140, 141, 142, 147, 148 and 149 of the Revised Statutes are repealed.

Boys in the Navy.

The Secretary of the Navy proposes to avail himself immediately of the privileges conferred upon him by the act, which recently became a law, authorizing the enlistment of 750 boys in the navy. He will issue in a few days a circular, setting forth the requirements of candidates, and will give it as wide a circulation as possible. The Secretary will then detail the Wachusett, now lying at Boston, to proceed to New Orleans, and from that point sail up the Mississippi as far as St. Louis, touching at all the principal places for the purpose of examing such candidates as may present themselves, thus obtaining an infusion of Western blood, which Secretary Thompson naturally thinks will be an improvement to the personnel of the navy. This will not exclude candidates from the other sections, but, by extending the opportunities for enlistment, a better class of boys will be obtained. The Secretary is desirous of opening the way to these apprentices to promotion in the navy, and favors a change in the law by which cadets will be compelled to serve two years at sea before pursuing the college course. The present law is just the reverse of this, and results, in many cases, in educating boys for sea life who are physically unable to endure the hardships incident to such a life. The Secretary considers that such a change in the law would prove most salutary in weeding out from the ranks of the navy a large number of additions which only prove to be dead weights to the service.

A Pen Worth Recommending.

We have been favored with samples of the celebrated Spencerian Double Elastic Steel Pens, and after trying them feel justified in highly commending them to our readers. They are made of the best steel, and by the most expert workmen in Europe, and have a national reputation for certain desirable qualities which no other pens seem to have attained in so great perfection, among which are uniform evenness of point, durability, flexibility, and quill action. It is thus quite natural that the Spencerian should be preferred and used by professional penmen, in business colleges, counting-rooms, government offices, public schools, and largely throughout the country. Indeed, so popular have they become, that of the "Number One" alone, as many as eight millions are sold annually.

The Spencerian pens may be had, as a rule, from any dealer; but when not thus obtainable, the proprietors, Messrs. Ivison, Blakeman, Taylor & Co., the well-known publishers, 138 & 140 Grand street, New York, will send for trial, samples of each of the twenty numbers on receipt of twenty-five cents.

THE JUNE number of the Penn Monthly, published by the Penn Monthly Association, Nos. 125 & 127 North Seventh street, Philadelphia, has reached our table. It is filled with many very interesting articles, among which is a review of the month, "Key to Success," "Our Hospitals for the Insane," and many others, both interesting and instructive. This magazine is one of the most beautiful in mechanical make up as well as one of the most valuable. Terms, $3 per year.

Value of Lime.

Mr. Thomas Lake, Rockford, Ill., sends to the Tribune the particulars of an interesting instance of the successful use of lime on worn out land, that came under his observation many years ago in England. The soil, a strong clay was so completely exhausted that the poverty of the last crops obtained from it was the talk of the whole neighborhood. It passed into the hands of a new owner, who, after a Summer-fallow and a most thorough cultivation, gave it such a liberal dose of lime, with no manure, that in the opinion of all who saw the work going on the condition of things would be even worse than before. But the prophets of ill failed their mark; the first crop was sixty bushels of wheat per acre, and the next was a correspondingly large yield of barley.

We often hear of the fringe of a mob and the skirts of a crowd, but it has just occurred to us that this fringe and these skirts would probably be trimmed with popu-lace.

PROF. HARRIS' RADICAL CURE FOR SPERMATORRHŒA.
—THE—
"SEMINAL PASTILLE."

SHAPE & SIZE OF A SEMINAL PASTILLE

A Valuable Discovery and New Departure in Medical Science, an entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent Cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency by the only true way, viz: Direct Application to the principal Seat of the Disease, acting by Absorption, and exerting its specific influence on the Seminal Vesicles, Ejaculatory Ducts, Prostate Gland and Urethra. The use of the Remedy is attended with no pain or inconvenience, it is quickly dissolved and soon absorbed, producing an immediate soothing and restorative effect upon the sexual and nervous organization wrecked from self-abuse and excesses, stopping the drain from the system, restoring the mind to health and sound memory, removing the Dimness of Sight, Nervous Debility, Confusion of Ideas, Aversion to Society, etc. etc., and the appearance of premature old age usually accompanying this trouble, and restoring perfect Sexual Vigor, where it has been dormant for years. This mode of treatment has stood the test in very severe cases, and is now a pronounced success. Drugs are too much prescribed in these troubles, and, as many can bear witness to, with but little, if any permanent good. There is no nonsense about this preparation. Practical observation enables us to positively guarantee that it will give satisfaction.—During the eight years that it has been in general use, we have thousands of testimonials as to its value, and it is now conceded by the Medical Profession to be the most rational means yet discovered, of reaching and curing this very prevalent trouble, that is well known to be the cause of untold misery to so many, and upon whom quacks prey with their useless nostrums and big fees. The Remedy is put up in a neat box, enough to last a month, and sent to a plain wrapper by mail, sealed, for $3.—Two boxes (such as is used to effect a permanent cure unless in severe cases), $5.—Two boxes, lasting three full months, (will stop embarkment and restore vigor, in the worst cases,) $7.—Full DIRECTIONS for using will accompany EACH BOX.

(Send for a Descriptive Pamphlet giving Anatomical illustrations, which will convince the most sceptical that they can be restored to perfect manhood, and fitted for the duties of life, as near as if never affected. Sent sealed for stamp to any one. Sold ONLY by the CARD.

Owing to the general reduction in prices of all commodities, we saw fit, about the last of March, to reduce prices on all classes of general merchandise, and, among others, we placed Arabuckle's coffee at 18½ cents—a reduction of 6½ cents per pound over all others—since which an effort was made by a combination of merchants to keep us from getting these coffees. We wish to notify the community generally that we are ready to fill all calls for Arabuckle's coffee, or any other goods in our line, at published prices, all comments to the contrary notwithstanding. Temperance Meetings.

Last week was an active one among the temperance workers in Bellefonte, and if any good is to be accomplished by hard, persistent labor, then we think that the efforts made last week to bring men out of the paths of degradation, caused by intemperance, will not have been made in vain.

Temperance meetings were held in the Court House on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Bellefonte, which organization is deserving of great commendation for the able and active manner in which they have been, and are, carrying on the warfare against King Alcohol.

Notwithstanding the disagreeable weather of last week, the speakers at these meetings were listened to by respectable and attentive audiences.

A number of speakers from abroad took part in these meetings, including Mrs. R. F. Ellis, of Philadelphia, who has been with us before, and Dr. Richard Thomas and Mrs. Mary W. Thomas, of Baltimore, who were connected with Mr. D. L. Moody in the temperance cause during the past winter, and whose efforts to correct the mistakes of the fallen have always been crowned with marked success. Mr. Thomas is a very pleasing, easy talker, and has the power of securing the close attention of his audience. With such speakers and co-laborers these meetings should not be without good results, and the leaders of the movement assure us that great good has already been done.

—The decoration ceremonies at Pleasant Gap, of which we neglected to speak in our last issue, were enthusiastically carried out. Patriotism filled the hearts of the populace, and a large throng turned out to do honor to the departed heroes. The procession, headed by the Pleasant Gap band and three Sunday-schools, marched to the cemetery, and at four o'clock the exercises took place. Mr. Christopher Dale read the opening service, after which D. S. Keller, Esq., of this place, delivered the oration, which was attentively listened to by the large crowd assembled. Revs. Wood, Chambers and Furst were also present and assisted in the services.

At Potters Bank the ceremonies were participated in by almost the same people as at Centre Hall, and were similarly carried out. Rev. Robinson delivered the address.

—Mr. Samuel P. Kipple, a former resident of Altoona, was murdered near Hayes City, Kansas, on the morning of May 28th. He was shot by a man owning property next to his. The Altoona Tribune says it is not known what caused the tragedy, but is supposed to have originated from what is known in Western language as "jumping a claim." Deceased was a brother of Mr. Andrew Kipple, who is foreman of the freight shops in Altoona.

—The Chambersburg Public Opinion, in its issue of June 7th, published cuts of Hezekiah Shaffer and "Peachy" Swingler, the two Franklin county murderers. Shaffer was executed on the 17th of last April for murdering his wife, and Swingler, who was a colored man, was hanged last Friday for killing another colored man named Anderson, on the 17th of December, 1878.

—Frank Thompson, General Manager of the Penn'a R. R.; Charles E. Pugh, General Superintendent; Theodore N. Ely, Superintendent of Motive Power and Machinery and S. S. Blair, Superintendent of the Tyrone Division, arrived in Bellefonte last Thursday morning on a special train. They remained but a few minutes on business for the company.

—The first flow of oil from the Bradford oil district, through the 100-mile pipe line, reached Williamsport last Wednesday evening. It runs in a strong, steady stream, and has proved a complete success. Only a few trifling leaks have been discovered in its entire length.

—The chairman of the Democratic county committee has appointed O. M. Sheets, Richard Conley and Ellis Lytle members of the committee for the new precincts of Ferguson, Benner and Halfmoon, in place of I. H. Neidigh, Samuel Yearick, and John Miller.

—E. W. Hale and H. P. Blair, Esqs., two of Philipsburg's worthy citizens, spent a part of last Wednesday afternoon in our sanctum. They were in town to muster in the new post of G. A. R.

—Philip Teats, who is in the dairy business with Mr. Holmes, at Altoona, popped into Bellefonte a week ago last Saturday. Peddling butter and milk hasn't made him a bit stuck up.

—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reed, of Lock Haven, arrived in town last Friday afternoon and spent some time with their friends.

Fleming—Ward.

The above parties, Mr. E. I. Fleming and Miss Bella P. Ward, two of Bellefonte's most highly respected young people, were united in marriage last Thursday afternoon. The ceremonies were performed by Rev. Yocum, at the house of the bride's parents, where quite a number of friends had congregated. The wedding was a plain, modest affair, without any ostentatious display, greatly in keeping with the lives of the young couple.

The newly-married couple received some very pretty and useful gifts from their numerous friends, among other things a handsome China tea service, a number of articles of glassware, etc. Mr. Mann, of Mann's Axe Factory, thinking, probably, that Mr. Fleming might have occasion, at some time to split stove wood, presented him with a handsomely-finished axe. To their friends who have so graciously presented them with such lasting tokens of friendship, Mr. Fleming and his bride desire to return their warmest thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. Fleming left on the evening train for a short bridal trip. We offer our congratulations, and hope that their journey through life may be fraught with naught but happiness and prosperity.

Obituary.

Mrs. Charles McAfferty, who had been lying very low for a long time at her residence on Allegheny street, died last Saturday morning, aged 54 years, 1 month and 3 days. She was born in Bellefonte, and married the 16th of June, 1854. She was the mother of five sons, and was a member of the Presbyterian church. For three months she was confined to her bed, but remained sensible to the last. She had been a great sufferer, and death, which has removed her to a home where sickness and trials are not allowed to enter, was a relief. A faithful wife and a kind mother, her loss will be sadly felt by those who are left to mourn. The funeral took place Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

—Senator Alexander and Representatives Murray and Gephart have arrived from Harrisburg, the Legislature having adjourned last Thursday. It is but right to tell our readers that Mr. Gephart has been a faithful member, so far as attendance is concerned, he having missed but two hours of the whole time the House was in session. Mr. Murray unavoidably was absent several days.

—The Ladies' Foreign Missionary Society met at Mrs. James A. Beaver's last Friday evening. There was a good attendance and a great deal of interest manifested by those present. A very interesting feature of the evening was a short address by Mrs. Ogden, concerning what she saw and heard of the missionary work in Africa, while a resident of that far-off clime, years ago.

—It is estimated that 1,800 people were in attendance at the State Sunday-school convention held in Altoona on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week, and hundreds were turned away, not being able to find even standing room. Over five hundred delegates reported to the officers of the convention.

—We learn from the Philipsburg Journal that Mr. Harry Williams, of that place, formerly of Bellefonte, while out horse-back riding a few evenings ago, had the misfortune to be thrown from his horse, receiving some severe wounds about the face.

—Rev. John Jasper, of the Baptist church, Richmond, Va., the originator of the expression, "The Sun do Move," is announced on the programme to take part in the services of the colored camp-meeting at this place.

—Hon. H. P. Rodgers, once U. S. Minister to Sardinia, and a member of the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1838, has been in town for several days. Mr. Rodgers is known extensively by the legal fraternity.

—The Town Council last week appropriated $200 to the Undine Hose Company and $50 to the Logan Hose Company for this year. The Logan Company get their hall rent free, which amounts to about $150.

—If anything will impress the human mind with ecstasy, it is the expression of the man's face who has just been to Sechler's and purchased a lot of his groceries and meat. His face looks like a wee heaven.

—Mr. George Wilson, of Lancaster, who was in the employ of Mr. Bartruff last summer, as carriage trimmer, is spending a few weeks in town.

—Pleasant Gap will dedicate her new hall on July 4th. The cornet band of that place will furnish the music.

More House-Breaking.

That Bellefonte is infested by a gang of scoundrels who make a regular business of house-breaking and robbing seems to be an established fact. Whether these depredations are committed by our townspeople or by tramps who lurk about in obscure places in day time, is not known. At any rate some of the robberies that have been committed of late have been performed in a workmanlike manner—in a way which shows that the actors have tried their hand at it before.

Last Saturday night a week the residence of Postmaster Johnston was entered by one or more of these scamps, who, perhaps, calculated on making a big haul of "four per cents." Notning, however, was taken. The thief, on the other hand, came very near being taken himself. It seems that the front door of the house had been left open until an unusually late hour upon this night, on account of the heat, and the would-be robber took the hint and stepped in, concealing himself behind the door. While there pondering over his next course of action Mrs. Johnston, not knowing of his presence in the house, slipped down and fastened up the house, including the front door, upon which there is a complicated lock, and also a door leading up stairs. This debarred the thief from further entrance into the house, and also cut off his retreat from the same. He soon became aware of this state of affairs, and realizing that there was likely to be more fun than he could handle should he linger longer, began to force his way out, which woke up the inmates. He made good his escape, however, and probably don't care about trying the same game over again.

If there is no way in which these miscreants can be brought to light, our citizens, in order to protect themselves, will have to roost on the front porch with a shot-gun for a companion.

Runaway.

Last Saturday afternoon a two-horse team, belonging to B. F. Vomeada, of Zion, which was tied to a hitching-post in front of Joseph Devling's residence, on Smith street, became frightened by some dogs, who were settling a dispute under the wagon, broke loose from their fastenings, and dashed down the street at breakneck speed, in the direction of Duncan's mill. Where the road turns off at the glass works they encountered another team, standing by the road, which was turned completely over, though not much damaged. On rushed the affrighted steeds, down through Alexander's coal yard, across the railroad, and out to the creek. At sight of the water the firey animals seemed to have cooled down, and came to a halt, when they were shortly afterwards recovered by their owner. The horses, we believe, were not injured, but the wagon was a total wreck. Luckily, the wagon contained no occupants at the time of the accident.

Telephones.

Bellefonte now enjoys the privilege of being pretty well connected one part with the other by telephone. The line was erected last week, and instruments put in at the following places: W. U. Telegraph office, B. & S. S. R. R. office, I. Guggenheimer's High street store, E. & E. M. Blanchard's office, Bush, Yocum & Hastings' office, 1st National Bank, Centre County Bank, Brockerhoff House, Guggenheimer's Allegheny St. store, Alexander & Bower's office, Court House, Sheriff's office, E. T. Tuten's residence. With this admirable arrangement, Chief Burgess Hastings may sit in his office and call to his assistant, or ye editor may enquire of his wife what are the prospects of having anything to eat at meal time—whether any of our delinquents have brought home a sack of corn meal or sich like.

A code of signals has been adopted, so that when intelligently understood, there can be no trouble. The line works first-rate. Many of our people have been investigating the curious invention.
